Hello, dear audience!

This is INDROJIT DHE SHAON. I want to talk about a frightening experience when I almost had an accident.

It happened about 13 months ago, in December 2024. At that time, I was travelling by train to Delhi on an emergency trip. During the trip, the train stopped at a station. I was not sure how long the stop would be, but I assumed it would stay for about five minutes.

I noticed some food stalls outside, so I got down from my coach and went to buy some food. Unfortunately, while I was paying the bill at the food counter, the train suddenly started moving. In fact, it stopped there for only two minutes, which I didn't expect at all.

At that moment, I had my wallet with me, but my bag and all my belongings were still inside the train. I was completely shocked at that moment. Without thinking properly, I quickly grabbed the food and started running beside the train.

I missed my own coach. Then, in panic, I tried to get into another coach while the train was still moving. I almost had a serious accident. Luckily, I managed to hold the train with one hand and place one foot on the steps. At that moment, a person inside the train pulled me in and saved my life.

After that, I was badly shaken, but I sincerely thanked the person who helped me.

It was truly one of the scariest moments of my life, and I still remember it clearly. This experience taught me an important lesson. No matter how urgent the situation is, we should never try to get on a moving train.

That's all for today. Thank you so much for your patience!
